ANOTHER CRASH ON HIGHWAY

Here and There

—Editorial By ALEX. H. WASHBURN—

CANDIDATE Howard Reed came to our town Monday night and attacked Governor Futrell, who is asking for re-election. Candidate Reed based his case against the governor on (1.) overloading the State Revenue Department with political appointments, and (2.) permitting the scandal of employing trusty guards at the state penitentiary instead of hired guards.

The State Revenue Department is loaded with political appointments—of course. I never heard of an administration, in Arkansas or anywhere else, that didn't put as many of its supporters as possible in the various public departments.

Whether the State Revenue Department is "overloaded," however, is a matter for the state comptroller to decide. Griffin Smith's summary of 18 months of the Futrell administration, published this month in this newspaper, showed that the present regime had reduced Arkansas' general revenue overdraft from approximately 1 million dollars to less than 700 thousand dollars.

You can jump on any department of any state, or any department of a private business, and find plenty to criticize—but if the state or business as a whole is prospering, paying off its honest debts through wise management, then glory be to the man at the head of it!

X X X

As far as the penitentiary is concerned, Arkansas has struggled with this problem for years, through the administrations of many governors.

The plain facts are that if we switch over to a system of hired guards to watch 1,700 convicts, instead of using trusties, then we shall have to dig up thousands of dollars additional tax money each year.

I agree with Howard Reed that a system of hired guards must be inaugurated to save the good name of Arkansas—but I disagree with Howard Reed when he charges Governor Futrell with failure to provide that system before now.

Governor Futrell took a state that was virtually bankrupt, and set to work paying off its debts.

A man saving a business from bankruptcy has to turn his attention to debts before he can think about improving his plant and equipment.

He can not pay debts and spend money for other things at one and the same time.

And I am confident that a man as successful as Governor Futrell has been in money matters the last 18 months can be counted on to improve the state's penal system during the next 18 months.

X X X

Howard Reed should be the last man on earth to criticize.

Wasn't he comptroller during the time Arkansas was being plunged into bankruptcy from which Futrell is now rescuing her?

What reason have we to believe Howard Reed could pay up the state's debts and at the same time improve the state's penal system when the administration which he served prominently failed to do either?

Futrell has accomplished one of the two jobs, and the fact that he hasn't been able to do the other won't damage him in the eyes of the people when criticized by the representative of an administration that failed on both.

Cotton Production Control Is to Be Handled Locally

1,000 Community Committees Set Up Under Bankhead Law

QUOTAS ON 5 YEARS

18,000 Local Citizens to Serve on Enforcement Group

WASHINGTON —(AP)— A widespread semi-official organization was completed Tuesday to handle the most revolutionary production control program ever attempted in this country—the cotton reduction plan provided in the Bankhead act.

The Farm Administration announced that comunity committees scattered through the 1,000 counties of the cotton belt had been selected. They will co-operate with county committees, already set up, in assembling data by which the allowed cotton production of 2,000,000 will be determined.

The AAA issued a 50-page set of regulations under which the job will be done—a revision of preliminary rules already placed in effect in the country's unusually early cotton area.

The act limits production to 10,460,251 bales of 478 pounds net weight. Cotton grown in excess of quotas et will be subject to a 50 per cent tax.

Procedure Outlined

The procedure by which the farmer will receive his production allotment will be substantailly this:

First he will go to his community committee to make his application, giving all information as to his past production.

Quotas will be determined generally on the basis of the production average for the fove year base period 1928-32, except of course, that persons heretofore not growing cotton may not get allotments.

Second, the community committee will check and pass the information on to the county committee.

Third, the county committee will pass it on to the state allotment board, which, when all applications are in, will determine allotments of individual producers, based on the county-wide allocation already made.

Applications must be presenttd personallly by growers or their agents. They may not be mailed in. A landlord may sign without the signature of a sharecropper or tenant or vice versa.

The number of committeemen going to work on the program is estimated at 18,000 asuming that ther will be an average of as many as five community committes in a county.

The county and community committees to administer individaul quotas for farmers under the Bankhead compulsory cotton control act in Arkansas, have been selected, T. Roy Reid assistant director in charge of the State Agricultural Extension Service said Tuesday night.

When the application forms have been recived by the county agents the committees wil be ready to function. The county agents will notify farmers where they can obtain the applications.

A state board which will pass on the recommendations of the county and comunity committees will be set up in Little Rock within the next few days Mr. Reid said. The board will see that each county has its correct quota.

Nine ships were being unloaded behind the police lines.

Conferences at 'Frisco

SAN FRANCISCO, Calif. —(AP)—Two vital conferences were called Wednesday in an effort to reach an immediate strike settlement.

The mediators, encouraged by offers of arbitration, sought ways and means of bringing workers' representatives and employers together to discuss terms, while the shipowners planned a meeting to discuss the proposal of the maritime workers for recognition of their union.

Arbitration Looms

SAN FRANCISCO, Calif.—(AP)—An *arbitration proposal gave hope Wed*nesday to the strike-prostrated bay cities.

The general strike committee called on opposing forces in the Pacific coast maritime strike for a "showdown," voting to arbitrate differences and send all strikers back to work as soon as the shipowners agree to recognize the martime unions.

Although the proposal failed to forecast specifically the end of the general walkout of nearly 100,000 union workers, it was quickly hailed as a possible way out of the demoralizing crisis which has paralyzed normal service to 1 million 300 hundred thousand residents of the metropolitan area.

Street car service remained at a standstill and food continued to move into the city only under the protection of the National Guard.

Unauthorized by A. F. of L.

CHICAGO.—(AP)—William A. Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, Wednesday asserted that the general strike at San Francisco was neither ordered nor authorized by that organization, and has no national significance so far as organized labor is concerned.

Green explained there had been some confusion in the public mind and he believed an explanation from him to clear up the situation was in order.

Force Cafes to Open

OAKLAND, Calif. — As a citizens committee opened four restaurants without authorization of the general strike committee threatening crowds gathered here but were dispersed without disorder, and the police maintained patrols along the streets both here and in Berkeley.

Favor Arbitration

SAN FRANCISCO —(AP)— The powerful San Francisco General Strike Committee Tuesday night virtually told striking Pacific coast longshoremen and marine workers to submit to arbitration or do without the support of the mass walkout now gripping the metropolitan area.

The committee made its stand contingent on agreement by employers of the maritime workers to recognize the general unions in the general strike as the labor organizations properly representing the various trades in whose names the walkout originally was declared.

Vigilantes Active

The committee's action was taken while San Francisco's police and self-styled citizen "vigilantes" began separate but savage attacks upon Communists strongholds in the city.

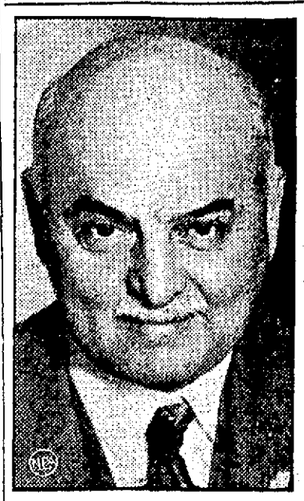

Every effort was made to check the records and nationalities of those rounded up in the drive to clean out agitators and prevent violence, Distrtict Attorney Mathew Brady said.

"I shall use my best endeavors," he added, "to have such of them who are not citizens and are not entitled to remain in this country nor to draw subsistence, turned over the the Labor Department for deportation.

The resolution for arbirtation which was adopted by a vote of 270 to 180 called upon the governors of Washington, Oregon and California and the mayors of affected port cities therein to appeal to President Roosevelt "to act in this emergency to the end that all waterfront employers and recognized organizations of the employes be re-

Dakotan Demands Troops Withdraw

Convicted Governor Holding on With Aid of National Guard

BISMARCK, N. D.—(AP)—As Governor Langer clashed with the authority of Lieutenant Governor Ole H. Olson, who is acting governor as the result of a State Supreme Court order, Olson Wednesday called on the adjutant general's office to withdraw National Guardsmen and end the state-wide martial law.

Martial law was established by Langer, who recently was convicted of a federal felony and was ordered ousted by the State Supreme Court.

BISMARCK, N. D.—(AP)—Governor William Langer Wednesday ruled North Dakota by military force in defiance of a State Supreme Court order ousting him from office.

The declaration of military rule came with dramatic suddenness as Langer declared he would oppose any attempt to remove him. A score of National Guardsmen took up their posts at the state house after the declaration.

A high judicial official said federal troops might be asked here in view of Langer's defiance of the supreme court order.

Under Martial Law

BISMARCK, N. D.—(AP)—The city of Bismarck was placed under martial law Tuesday night by order of William Langer a few hours of the State Supereme Court ordered him ousted as governor.

Use of the state militia also brought into play again remarks made by lawyers for Olson in the supreme court proceedings. It was charged by Olson's attorney that Langer planned to set himself up as a de facto head of the state government should the court rule adversely to him.

Bismarck represented a "powder-keg" with an air of tension seldom experienced in stete history. The citizenry carried an attitude of "anything can happen" and nervously retired for the night to await Wednesday developments. Just what the status of Langer will be remained uncertain. The fact that the military authority supercedes the civil authority in a declaration of martial law sent political leaders scurring to law books to determine the status of North Dakota's state government.

Court Rules For Olson

Langer's troublous 19 monts tenure of the governorship of Nort Dakota was ended — conditionally — Tuesday night by the State Supreme Court.

Lieut. Gov. Ole Olson, one-time Langer ally but lately his foe, was declared acting governor to end a contest over the office which followed Langer's conviction June 7 on a federal charge of conspiring to solicit political contributions from government workers.

However, the supreme court said that if Langer's pending appeal to the Circuit Court of Appeals should result in a reversal of his disqualification—the federal conviction—he might resume office.

The conviction resulted in imposition of an 18-month prison sentence and $10,000 fine on Langer.

Olson announced he probably would cancel Langer's call for a special ses-

A Correction Upon Howard Reed Speech

In yesterday's edition reporting the campaign speech of Howard Reed here Monday night, The Star reported:

"Touching again on the State Revenue Department, Reed said that the governor had built up a powerful political ring, placing 2,036 employes in this one department."

The Star wishes to correct an error in reporting. The number of revenue employes was given by Mr. Reed as 236—not 2,036. A staff writer following the candidate's speech without help of a manuscript, misunderstood the figures, and the headline, being based on the reporter's story, also carried the erroneous figure of 2,036.

This correction is made without solicitation either from Mr. Reed's headquarters or any other source, the error being discovered by comparison with others in Mr. Reed's audience who were closer to the mechanical loud-speakers Monday night and heard him correctly.

Drouth Threatens, Mercury Hits 105

Hottest This Year in Hope at 2 p. m. Wednesday —State Needs Rain

LITTLE ROCK —(AP)— The spectre of the 1930 drouth hung over Arkansas Wednesday as the mercury climbed steadily to threaten a repitition of Tuesday's record for the summer.

Newport, Corning and Fort Smith topped the list Tuesday with readings of 106, the highest in the state since the 1930 drouth forced ½ million Arkansans on the relief rolls.

Homes and pastures near Benton were threatened by forest fires, and unable to cope with the flames the farmers appealed to the Forest Reserve Service.

The river at Fort Smith was at its lowest stage since 1930.

At Camp Pike the C. M. T. C. boys wer relieved from drill because of the intense heat.

Wednesday set a new heat record for this summer in Hempstead, the mercury in the official thermometer at the Fruit & Truck Branch Experiment Station touched 105 degrees at 2 p. m.

A slight haze appearing over the sun at 2:30 had reduced the temperature to 103, however.

The highest previous mark was 103 degrees Tuesday.

Local Boy Critically Hurt Aboard His Speeding Motorcycle

ON EAST THIRD ST.

Cyclist Hurled Over Automobile—His Head Strikes Pavement

George Shipp, 21, son of Deputy Sheriff Allan Shipp, was battling for his life Wednesday in Josephine hospital as the result of a motorcycle-automobile collision on East Third street about 9 o'clock Tuesday night.

Hurled through space for more than 30 feet when he crashed head-on into a car driven by Ray Turner, Shipp landed on the pavement, sustaining a crushed skull.

His prostrate body was picked up by witnesses and taken to the hospital. He suffered two light convulsions soon after arriving.

Chance For Recovery

After midnight he rested quietly and Wednesday morning physicians for the first time expressed hope for his recovery. His condition was described as "crushed skull and semi-conscious."

Shipp had been riding on the Emmet highway and was returning to Hope. Near the Home-Ice company he whipped around a car headed in the same direction he was traveling, but fail to swing back on the right side of the road before crashing into the Turner car which was headed east toward Emmet.

Shipp plowed head-on into the car, traveling at an estimated speed of 40 to 50 miles an hour. He left the motorcycle seat and was hurled over the Turner car.

A few minutes before the accident, Shipp had been carrying his young wife on the rear of the machine. He had taken her home and was riding alone at the time of the mishap.

Funeral For Sandifer

While Shipp was battling for his life ,a grief-stricken mother was making funeral arrangements Wednesday for burial of her second born—Frank Sandifer, 14, who was killed in an accident early Tuesday on the Bodcaw-Buckner road.

The youth died 20 minutes after arrival here. His father, Jess Sandifer, was seriously hurt sustaining head injuries, a broken arm and internal injuries. Another person, Jason McClure received bruises and several broken ribs when a truck loaded with watermelons overturned and pinned the three beneath the machine.

The funeral for young Sanifer will probably be held Wednesday afternoon near Falcon, relatives of the dead boy said Wednesday morning.

The father will not attend. Helped from his hospital bed into a wheel chair, he was rolled to Hope Furniture company undertaking parlors Tuesday afternoon and viewed the body of his son for the last time.

The youth is survived by his mother, father, one sister, Mrs. Maxine tonton, and one brother, Dwight Sandifer, aged 4.

JOPLIN, Mo.— (AP) — Mrs. Juanita Johnson, 25, was instantly killed, and her companion, Miss Aldena Ambler, 25, was critically wounded when the two were shot, allegedly by the former's husband, in a ravine near Lamar, Mo., Tuesday.

Fred Johnson of Lamar, accused of the slaying, was arrested and spirited out of town to avoid possible mob violence. Miss Ambler is in a hospital at Carthage.

She said Johnson asked the two women to take a walk with him last midnight after the two had returned from work at a Lamar poultry plant.

Arriving at the ravine about a mile from town, Johnson accused his wife of not loving him. Miss Ambler said he shot his wife once in the breast and she fell dead.

Miss Ambler said she ran to a fence but while stooping to crawl under it she was shot in the back.

Your Health

By DR. MORRIS FISHBEIN

Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygeia, the Health Magazine

Feed Your Skin Well to Keep It Healthy

Your skin gets the nourishment necessary for its life from your blood, exactly as do other tissues of your body.

You can't feed the skin very well from outside. For this reason, everything called "skin food" is wrongly named.

There are no more special skin foods than there are special brain foods.

It is true that some foods contain more of certain ingredients of the brain than do others, but it is up to your stomach and intestines to digest and deliver the essential substances to your blood supply. They are then carried to the parts of the body that need them.

Condition of your blood, therefore, is of the greatest importance to the health of your skin. If the blood is deficient in red coloring matter, if it is full of poisonous waste products that should be eliminated, this condition is promptly reflected in condition of the skin.

If the liver fails properly to get rid of the bile, the bile gets into the blood. The skin, as a result, develops a yellow tinge. Moreover, an excess of bile is followed by severe itching.

In diabetes there is too much sugar which cannot be properly used by the body. As a result, the skin is lowered in its resistance and boils multiply.

The perspiration is modified so that it favors the growth of germs. Secretions of the body are irritating to the skin with which they come in contact.

As a result, the skin becomes inflamed and is easily infected. For this reason, particularly, absolute cleanliness of the skin is essential to a diabetic.

Another condition which seriously affects the skin of the body is constipation. If the bowels fail to eliminate waste matter, toxic substances are discharged into the blood and, on reaching the skin, damage its condition. Therefore, chronic constipation is frequently associated with appearance of pimples.

One way in which yeast sometimes relieves cases of pimples and blackheads is to encourage action of the bowels, and in this way to keep the poisonous materials from reaching the skin.

While there are no specific skin foods, the health of your skin can be improved by limiting the number of bacteria that live on it. This, of course, is accomplished by frequent bathing.

The bath, particularly when a good soap suitable to your skin is employed, keeps germs off the surface of the body.

Women with abnormally dry skins cannot tolerate soap at any time. Their skins become scaly. Itch follows the use of soap. In these cases use of a cleansing cream is warranted.

If you have an exceedingly greasy skin, however, you should avoid cleansing creams. Your skin is best cared for by regular washing with soap and hot water.

Use of cold water after hot water has a tonic effect on the skin and stimulates it.

What an Island Did to an Odd Family —This Novel Is Charming, But It's a Little Too Arty

By BRUCE CATTON

"Rumor of Heaven," by Beatrice Lehman, is one of those novels in which you go tiptoeing about with the greatest delicacy, conscious that you are reading something that is pretty artistic, but vaguely wishful that somebody would tell you just what ti is all about.

It begins by telling about one of those queer, isolated families of which European novelists seem so fond. A literary gent marries a famous dancer and sets up in a remote English farmhouse. They have three children, and then the dancer goes balmy and has to be taken away.

The father, whose mind is also beginning to get a trifle fuzzy, brings up the children by himself.

The youngsters are likewise an odd lot. The eldest girl is practically normal, but the boy is definitely headed up Queer street and the third child, a girl, is a cripple who spends most of her time conversing with the people in Jane Austen's novels.

Into this group, then, there comes a brawny explorer from the South Seas. He has found a fabulous island there—the kind you dream about, where climate and scenery are quite perfect and there are neither natives nor obnoxious insects.

He wants to found a colony there. But nobody will believe there is such a place—nobody, except the members of this very odd family. And to these folks this rumor of an earthly paradise is a profoundly unsettling thing. In different ways it upsets the applecart for each of them.

Published by Morrow, the book sells for $2.50.

Wounds From Rusty Nails Must Be Kept Open by Soaking—Treat Splinters the Same Way

To run a nail into the hand or foot isn't so good. We always speak of "rusty" nails, but it doesn't matter whether they are rusty to the eye or not, a dirtry nail, and most are, is just as bad as a rusty one when it comes to chances of infection and that dread word "tetanus."

No use going of fthe deep end and imagining that every kid who builds a shanty or runs about in his bare feet will get hurt. But in case he does there is that handy kit in the bathroom you have laid by for just such emergencies. However, while you're getting it, have someone call the doctor. Tell him what for, too, and he won't lose much time getting that foot or hand treated.

Wash Wound Thoroughly

If Johnny has a shoe on, get it off at once. "Then wash his foot with soap and water," directs Dr. Frederick H. Bartlett, famed pediatrist, "and keep it wet by a dressing of bicarbonate of soda (baking soda) or peroxide of hydrogen, or immerse the wound in an epsom salt solution (1 lb. to the pint)."

This will kep it opne until the doctor arrives.

Another authority, Mary W. Wheeler, R. N., suggests pouring the peroxide in after the soap-and-water wash, as it will foam up and loosen dirt particles, and recommends a salt solution (1 teaspoonful for every 2 cups water) in the basin for soaking the foot until the doctor's arrival.

At any rate, the procedure for home measures differs little. The object is to get the deep, narrow wound as clean as possible, and to keep it open either by soaking or by wet applications until it can be looked after professionally.

Deep splinters should be attended to in the same way. No— splinters don't get rusty, but anything dirty that sinks deeply into the tissues can't be played with. All accidents of the sort need a professional eye and hand.

Dirt and "Tetanus"

"Tetanus' 'is a word we fear mostly around the Fourth because we associate it with gunpowder only, but it can be caused by rust or dirt, too.

Don't let me suggest, jump to fearful conclusions and picture your child with lockjaw or something equally terrible if he gets hurt. There will be little need for worry if the doctor is called and the wound is cared for in one of the ways suggested above. These measures are only "first" aids. Albeit to keep one's head and set about treatment in a business-like way may be the very things that will discourage danger until more help arrives.

NEXT: Caring for cuts.

Here's A Way To Beat Expense in Planning Beauty Routine

Many a girl truly wants to improve her skin, hair and figure but fear of ruining the budget keeps her from planning helpful beauty routine. She believes any number of expensive preparations will be needed and that unless she can have a complete supply, there's no use starting at all. Generally speaking, she's wrong in her suppositions. Three or four good items can go a long way toward keeping your beauty up to par. As for the other recommended necessities—well, there are various home-made substitutes that are adequate.

Every one needs to use a patter when applying tissue cream and skin tonic or astringent. Patters often are quite expensive so why not make your own? Simply take a large piece of cotton (cotton is very cheap if you buy it by the pound roll), fold it so that one-half makes a nice pad and the other half a convenient handle."

You'll find it easier if you dip the cotton in ice cold water before you start to fold it. And that's another money-saving plan. By dipping any cotton pad in ice water, wringing it out before you soak it in skin tonic, you'll use much less skin tonic. Naturally, a cotton pad patter will have to be moistened and then wrung out before you start patting in nourishing cream.

There are now only about 100 Chinese in Limehouse, London's Chinatown, and only one of these is a known opium smoker.

SOPHIE KERR'S SUPERB LOVE STORY

"STAY OUT OF MY LIFE!"

By Sophie Kerr

BEGIN HERE TODAY

JANE TERRY comes to New York determined to show her home town, Marburg, and especially AMY JACKSON that she can make a success of her life. Amy had been best friend until HOWARD JACKSON broke the engagement Jane had forced upon him and married Amy. In New York Jane obtains a position in a real estate office and soon is making a large income.

She has an affair with ROGER THORPE who is married but lives of him. When he offers to bear the expense of their child she contemptuously dismisses him. She confides in Amy, realizing she is her only friend. Jane insists on giving her daughter away and Amy takes the child, promising never to reveal its parentage. The baby is named NANCY.

Five years Jane stays away from Marburg. Then, on a business trip, she goes to Amy's home and asks to see her daughter. Amy is afraid Jane will insist on taking the child.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XXIV

"I CAN'T stand these boys enlisting," said Howard. "They're so young."

"More than half the graduating class," said Professor Lowe gloomily. "Lord knows how many of the undergraduates. They're afraid it'll be over before they get in."

They were sitting in Professor Lowe's study, Amy and her parents and her husband. The Sunday night music was over and all the others had gone.

Mrs. Lowe was knitting a stocking, first among that deluge of amateur work which was done so eagerly by women who longed to help and who knew nothing else, and who toiled away at it to appease this longing, even when they felt sure of the result's futility.

Amy stayed quiet, watching Howard, trying to keep all expression from her face. She knew that he had been wondering, ever since America had joined the Allies, if he ought to enlist. He did not want to wait to be drafted. They had talked about it very little. She had offered no objection. She left him free to make his decision. But it was tearing her heart to agony.

Mrs. Lowe went on: "A war to end war. What a catch phrase! It's a war to breed war. Here I sit knitting stockings to put on the feet of a young man marching to his death. We must keep his feet warm as he goes! I am ashamed of myself and all the other women like me."

"My dear," said Professor Lowe, "your Quaker ancestors are coming out strong tonight. Of course it's the pageantry and the fake glory that keep war going on, combined with the fact that the individual can make no effective protest. Marching men hypnotize us. If peace ever offers anything as rousing and as glamorous as a military parade with colors flying and bands playing and the long lines of men stepping in time—why, we're done for!"

• • • •

AMY could not stand any more. "We must go," she said. "Old Mrs. Pearce is staying with Nancy and she hates to be out too late."

"I always offer to go home with her," said Howard, "but that makes no hit at all. She doesn't want an escort. She wants to be home early."

So they left on this homely note. But out in the dark street Amy took hold of Howard's arm, held it tight. "You want to go," she said sadly.

"I don't know. I'm caught between the conventional traditional idea, and a sort of bleak commonsense. Everything your mother said about war is ghastly truth. There ought to be no war. It's an insanity. Nevertheless, there's a war going on and this country's joined in. Ought I to do my part in it, or ought I to stand out and protest and refuse to fight, be one of those freakish martyrs—you know, Amy, they are freaks in a way! You never can be quite convinced that they're great souls suffering for a principle. You always suspect cowardice. If I did protest—well, look at it on the practical politic side—I'd be kicked out of my job here in two minutes and I'd have an awful time getting another. And by God, I'd rather go and fight and be killed than to refuse and protest, if it didn't come from an overpowering personal conviction that would make me willing to lose all I have or hope to have rather than give in. Do you see?"

"Yes, I see. I do see and understand, Howard. Only—"

"Only—?"

"I love you, I love you. I live and breathe and move with you. When I think of you—oh, Howard, suppose it was reversed and I was going into the most horrible deadly danger—how would you feel, what would you do?"

"I couldn't bear it."

She did not answer, except by holding his arm closer. Presently he went on: "Suppose we stop thinking about it until after Commencement's over. Then we'll have a talk and decide. Something might come to change things. We can't tell."

"What's the use of putting it off, Howard? You've decided now. You've decided to go. The only thing you haven't decided is how and when."

• • • •

"I'VE decided this: If I go I want to try for the Aviation Corps. I may be too old. But that's as far as I've thought. We'll put all the rest off until after Commencement. We won't speak of it. We'll pretend we don't know. I'd rather have it that way. Oh, Amy, sweet, what else can I do? After all, I'm worth no more than anyone else. If I don't do my infinitesimal share I'll always feel a dirty mark against me. You don't think I want to go, do you, that I look forward to it in any way? The whole thing gives me a curious angry annoyance—my work interrupted, submitting myself to the idiotic exactions of army discipline which are absolutely foreign to natural living, and worst of all, to leave you. It was bad enough to go on the field trips and to start off with Ellert, but—oh, what's the use!"

"Yes, I know. You told me once to deal with facts, not feelings—and there's the war, and they want more men and here are you. And that's that! We'll take our little special vacation through Commencement and then, dearest, we can plan. Howard, I'm glad it's settled. It's been so awful to feel your uncertainty and not say anything. It divided me from you."

"Amy, you're never divided from me. There's never been anything false or deceiving or untrue between us and there never will be. The only reason I kept still about enlisting was because I wasn't sure, and it didn't seem fair to push my doubts off on you."

He put his key in the door and opened it with the last words. Instantly old Mrs. Pearce appeared at the head of the stairs, her bonnet on her head, her bag in her hand. "I'm all ready to go," she said in a loud whisper. "The baby's slept as good as gold, only woke up once and wanted a drink of water. Now don't say you're walking home with me, Mr. Jackson, for I won't let you. Nobody's going to run off with a girl my age, not in Marburg, nohow. Goodnight to both of you."

COMMENCEMENT in Marburg was always strenuous. There were so many established customs, besides the annual Class Day, Founders Day, Commencement Day, so many returning alumni, so many graduates' families, that the faculty was in constant flurry to keep it going. This year, outwardly, was like other years. The president gave his garden party for students, his reception for graduates and visitors. The juniors had their firefight. The glee club gathered before the Museum for their twilight concert of college songs. The sophomores and freshmen played their annual baseball game and afterward the freshmen tore up their caps.

Amy was accustomed to the routine from her childhood and had heretofore gone through it easily enough, constantly amused by its endless small importance, emergencies, pomposities and naivetes. But this year, though she went the round conscientiously, keeping teatable hordes in order, duty-dancing with speechless, awkward youngsters, standing in receiving lines, smiling until her face felt stiff, and listening to dull comments until her ears felt stuffed, she did it only with her surface consciousness, beneath which lay the dread she must enter as soon as the week was over.

She saw little of Howard except at a distance, on the speakers' rostrum, or piloting some distinguished visitor's wife toward the refreshment tables. All their talk was of the little day-to-day happenings: "Howard, the president telephoned. Call him back right away." "Howard, Professor Ellert's luncheon is at once, but he wants you to be there early," and "Amy, don't you think this dress shirt will do for one more night?" or "It looks like the usual thunderstorm for the garden party."

Japan to Demand Equal Sea Power

Nippon's Navy Chiefs Prepare for Showdown Next Year

TOKIO, Japan.—An official conference of 15 of the navy's highest officers which, it is believed, resulted in drafting policies that the navy will demand in view of the pending 1935 naval conference, was held here Monday.

The secret meeting was presided over by the imperial prince, Admiral Hiroyasu Fushimi, chief of the navy's General Staff. Minister of Navy Admiral Mineo Osumi submitted the naval policy reached at Saturday's meeting of the big five of Premier Admiral Keisuki Okada's new cabinet. It had been indicated that a decision to insist on the scrapping of all naval ratios and the granting of naval equality to Japan was reached.

Admiral Osumi affirmed the navy's claim for a Japanese navy on a parity with the navies of the United States and Great Britain. He added that the naval forces demanded the new conference establish equality for Japan in world naval rating and abolish the ratio system (under which a 5-5-3 rating exists now as between the United States, Great Britain and Japan). He also said perfection of armaments was demanded. He asked that the nation support three demands.

Witness Feared Old Court Record

June DeLong Admits This Turned Her to Thoughts of Suicide

LOS ANGELES, Calif.—(AP)—June DeLong, 24-year-old star witness for the state in the so-called "Hollywood morals" trial of Dave Allen and Gloria Marsh said Monday she attempted suicide Saturday because she knew records relating to her arrest in 1931 on a morals charge would be presented at the trial by the defense.

Miss De Long, who escaped from her guard Saturday and swallowed several pills she thought were poison, made the unexpected reference to her suicide atttempt, soon after she took the witness stand Monday, but it was ruled out of the record.

Prosecutor Arthur Veitch announced, as she took the witness chair, she had a correction to make concerning previous testimony.

"You denied last Friday, under cross examination, that you were arrested on a morals charge here in March, 1931," Veitch said to the flaxen-haired actress. "Do you wish to change that testimony now?"

"Yes," Miss De Long said, "I was arrested."

She admitted she had paid a $25 fine and spent five days in jail.

Defense Lawyer Jerry Geisler resumed cross examination.

"Didn't you realize, Miss De Long, at the time I asked you that question, that I planned to present records and witnesses concerning that arrest?" Geisler asked.

"Yes," the witness replied, "that's why I wanted to commit suicide."

Startled expressions crossed several jurors' faces at this statement and the words were stricken from the record at Geisler's request.

The jury, including the two alternates, which is being closely guarded by sheriff's deputies, has been locked up eich night. No newspapers or other publications have been permitted in their room. The jurors heard no other word concerning Miss De Long's dramatic disappearance Saturday noon and her recovery more than eight hours later.

Asked by Prosecutor Veitch if she wanted to give the jury any explanation of her false testimony concerning the morals arrest, Miss De Long said: "I figure I had already disgraced myself, and I couldn't see where the question had anything to do with this case."

Balloon Dance Is Trouble for Sally

Once Wind Blew It Away —Another Time the Balloon Blew Up

CHICAGO.—(AP)—Take it from one who knows, waving a couple of ostrich feathers is child's play compared to the intracies of hiding al la nude behind a transparent "bubble."

The authority for this is Sally Rand of world's fair fan dance notoriety, who took time out between shows to talk of her art—and her troubles.

Of the latter there seems to be no end. Last year it was the reformers who dogged her footsteps, insisting she must wear something more substantial than a plume.

This year it's the wiles of a capricious air-filled balloon that are giving the little lady sleepless nights.

The other night Sally was doing an admirable job of dancing behind the balloon when suddenly it bounced away and there was Sally all alone.

"I was petrified, just petrified," she said. "For a moment I didn't know what to do. Thank goodness a breeze came along and wafted it back."

By the next night she had, with the aid of stage mechanics—everything under control. That is, she did, until —boom—and the balloon was gone —out of the reaches of friendly breezes or human hands.

And what did Sally do? She ran for dear life. The explosion she thinks was the work of some uncouth person with a pin stuck in the end of a cane.

Henderson, clouting outfilder of the Rabbits, was brought into the pitcher's box for the game and held the Storks scoreless for the first four frames, but weakened to allow three tallies in the fifth. Errors and timely hits in the seventh and ninth added the final three to the losers' total.

The fielding honors for the day went to Pettit, shortstop for the Rabbits. With the cases loaded in the first inning, the Rabbit shortstop went deep into shortstop, almost behind third base to snare a drive with his bare hand and make a perfect throw to first for the putout. Again in the final inning, with two scores across the plate, Pettit came up with a sensational stop to put an end to a threatened rally.

sion of the legislature Thursday to consider his conviction.

Langer did not comment.

The supreme court announced a writ of quo warranto would be issued on the arrival of Olson's lawyer, Judge George H. Moellring, Langer appointee on the tribunal dissented.

Long-Continued Controversy

State political circles have reverberated with charges and counter charges since Langer first was removed last April as hend of the federal relief organization in the state, and later indicted and convicted by federal authorities for conspiracy to solicit contributions to The Leader, his administration newspaper, from federal workers in the state.

Langer called his indictment "political persecuction." During his trial his wife carried on his campaign which resulted in his victory over three rivals for the Republican nomination June 27. Two days later the federal court pronounced sentence on the governor and his four co-defendants.

Immediately Olson claimed the governor's office. His first attempt for Supreme Court action was refused on the ground that the dispute should go through the regular channels of a district court. But after Langer was sentenced the state high court entertained Olson's petition.

Hungry People Angry

SAN FRANCISCO, — A general strike is no stronger than its stomach. San Francisco's labor tie-up after 24 hours on a starvation diet appeared Tuesday to have developed a slight attack of enemia.

But whether the resumption of transportation facilities and food supplies was due to indigestion or conservatism, one thing was obvious, the strike certainly was not suffering from growing pains.

The noon whistle blows and 100,000 men and women, many of whom have gone breakfastless, forage for rations in the 19 restaurants allowed to remain open "by permission of the General Strike Committee," Not a tenth, hardly a twentieth of them can eat.

"I have been waiting here for an hour and a half," grumbles a horny-handed figure in the block-long cue outside Compton's restaurant. In his coat lapel gleams the blue button of the International Longshoremen's Association. "I thought us strikers were going to be fed first. What the hell kind of a strike is this anyway?"

"It took me four hours to get my breakfast coffee this morning," complains the driver of our borrowed car. "And believ me brother, when I wait that long for my Java my knees begin to chatter. Are they trying to starve us out of the city?"

Comunists Active

WASHINGTON— Communists, acting as a unit and under directions from Moscow, are churning up the strikes and industrial unrest that now spot the country, it was charged here Tuesday on behalf of the Federation of Labor and the National Association of Manufacturers.

Communistic activity is undoubtedly responsible for much of the general strike crisis in San Francisco, a spokesman for the American Federation of Labor said today, adding that the American Federation of Labor did not have any evidence to prove this.

That radicals of a Communistic or similar learing are fast taking the American labor movement out of the hands of the American Federation of Labor and other conservative leaders also became apparent Tuesday. The National Manufacturers Association reported that in every strike situation known to it. Communists had gained the upper hand over old line American Federation of Labor leaders.

The strike fever spread throughout the country, supporting the theory that a central agency, Communistic or otherwise is fomenting the trouble.

That Communists were at the bottom of the country's troubles was the one point on which both employers and workers 'organizations here agreed. The employers added that the present radical upheavals are only the natural outcome of the trade unionism fostered by the NRA and embodied in the American Federation of Labor.

Raid Communists

SAN FRANCISCO —(AP)—A series of raids known as Communist "hot spots" were under way here late Tuesday in connection with the general strike situation. Police were determined to smash the radical element in San Francisco.

Aroused civilians apparently had joined the police who started with an attack on the Marine Workers' Industrial union in the commision district. Nearly a hundred alleged radicals were hurried off to the city prison.

A band of about 25 men armed with baseball bats hammered their way in to the office of the Western Worker, communist organ. The interior was wrecked. Police rushed to the scene but the raiders had disappeared.

Civil War Threat

BERKELEY, Calif. —(AP)— Calling the general strike "civil war" Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, NRA administrator, declarded here Tuesday that the blocking of necessities of life to a whole people is a "bloody insurrection."

The right of dissatisfied men to strike against a recalcitrant employer is involate," General Johnson said in an addres before the University of California students. "This government has supported it and will support it to the limit. It is a weapon in a two-sided conflict. But the general strike is quite another thing.

"The general strike is a threat to the community. It is a menace to government . It is civil war."

The American people, he said, will not tolerate insurrection by such a general strike.

"It would be safer for a cotton-tail rabbit to slap a wildcat in the fact," he said, "than for this half of one percent of our population to try to strangle the rest of us into submission by any such means as this. Let's settle this thing and do it now."

Pay Tribute to Hoover

Johnson was awarded an honorary Phi Beta Kappa key by the university. The administrator, who spoke before the crowded auditorium, paid tribute to former President Hoover.

"To prove just what a rotten politician I am," he said, "I must with great respect and deference, pay respect to our fellow citizen of California, Herbert Hoover. He had an impossible job. He has eaten his own smoke. He is a great guy.

"In don't need to tell this audience about Hiram Johnson .In student days I regarded him with Teddy Roosevelt in a kind of awe. There is no question of his return to the Senate of the United States by the people of the state of the great golden bear."

Deadline on County Salary Law Sept. 6

County Petitions Must Be Filed Between August 8 and Then

LITTLE ROCK—Attorney General Hal Norwood suggests that locally initiated measures should be advertised by their sponsors in the newpapers of the county in which they are initiated in order to be on the safe side.

He has so advised R. T. Simmons, tax assesor at Newport, in which county the quorum court voted last December to initiate a county salary act.

In his letter to Mr. Simmons the attorney general pointed out that Section 9773 of Crawfrd & Moses Digest provides that the title and text of state-wide measures, together with the number and form in which the ballot title wil be printed on the official ballot, be published 30 days, beginning not later than three months before the election at which the measur is to be voted on.

"After all, the object in the publication of the initiated measure to the end that the electors going before the polls to vote thereon. may acquaint themselves with the provisions of the measures so that they may intelligently express their wil by the ballot," the attorney general continued. "I should thing two publications would be sufficient, one imediately after filing the petition and the other one or two wek's before the election."

The opinion said petitions for county measures should be filed not more than 90 days and not less than 60 days before the general election. The first date this year on which initiative petitions may be filed wil be August 8 and the last date will be September 6.

NO. 4 ROAD

Hope, it was announced Tuesday night pletion of Highway 4 from Camden to at the director's meeting.

This is the first step in the campaign for completion of this important transstate highway. This campaign was started by the formation of the Highway Four Association here July 3.

Various members of the Highway Commission have been contacted by the delegates from all the towns along this route and the hearing is the direct result of this personal work. No efforts wil be spared in this campaign.

W. T. Graham of Warren is chairman of the association.

The highway has been built 10 miles west of Camden but there remains an 11-mile stretch yet to be completed. This route serves Camden and Hope and will shorten the distance between these two cities 11 miles. It is the shortest route from east to west across the outhern portion of the tate and there is not a toll bridge on it.

Grizzlies, Crazed by Heat, Kill Man

Turn on Keeper in Denver Zoo—Their Friend for Years

DENVER. Colo.—(AP)—Two big grizzly bears, maddened by the heat, attacked and killed their keeper, Chas. E. Wyman, as he was cleaning their pen at the City Park zoo Tuesday.

Scores, attracted by the roars of the bears and the shouts of the 70-year-old keeper, stood by, powerless to aid. Zoo guards attempted to drive off the enraged animals by shotgun fire, but the buckshot seemed only to arouse the bears to greater fury.

Police were called, but before they could reach the scene Wyman had been mangled to death.

After they had killed their keeper, the bears slunk into their den. Officers enticed them out with delacies, then killed them with rifle fire.

Wyman had been friendly with the bears for years, and had no fear of them. He was washing the concrete floor with a hose. He playfully turned the stream on the bears as he had done many times before.

With a roar of rage, Lady Yellowstone, was was brought as a cub from Yellowstone Park 20 years ago, turned on the elderly keeper, swiping him across the face with her sharp claws. Blood spurted from Wyman's wounds and he was knocked backward. Lady Yellowstone's mate, Teddy, rushed in and knocked the keeper off his feet.

Both roaring, the bears lunged upon Wyman again as he attempted to blind them by turning the full force of the hose into their eyes. They paid no attention and clawed and mangled the keeper.

Wyman was rolled over and over by the bears until he fell into a deep moat at one end of the pit. Then Lady Yellowstone ducked his head under the water and swam the full length of the moat with him.

Then the bears returned to their den.

Federal Inspector of Meat Is Urged

Pulaski County Health Officer Confers With FERA Executives

LITTLE ROCK —Efforts will be made to obtain the services of a federal meat inspector in Pulaski county by the end of the week, is was announced following a conference of city, county and state health officials and FERA officials at the courthouse Tuesday.

The meeting was called by Dr. J. A. Summers, Pulaski county health officer, after Dr. Summers had padlocked the North Little Rock commissary Monday when he found spoiled meat being distributed there.

Dr. Sumers said he will attempt to inspect a few huundred pounds of meat the FERA has in stock for distribution this week, but that a federal inspector must be provided to work under his direction before the wholesale meat distribution plan is resumed.

FERA officals said they had requested the services of the county and city health officers to aid in inspecting the meat. Dr. Summers, who also is North Little Rock city health officer, said that he had received no request for assistance through either the county office of the North Little Rock city office.

E. E. Castelberry, FERA commissary officer, explained the system of meat inspection and said that he had heard few complaints. The county officials said they had received scores of complaints and Dr. Summers remained firm in his position that the inspection must be improved or the distribution halted.

Dr. W. F. Smith, member of the State Board of Health, said the government should be able to provide funds for the careful inspection of meat which is distributed by the government, and the services of the state board will be sought in obtaining the additional funds needed.

An Endorsement!

We, the undersigned citizens and qualified electors of Garland township, Hempstead county, Arkansas, take this method of endorsing the candidacy of J. C. Timberlake for Senator from this, the 20th Senatorial district, composed of Hempstead and Nevada counties.

We know Mr. Timberlake is a man of integrity and marked ability, and if elected would reflect great credit to himself and the district at large. Furthermore he is a man of high Christian character and noble ideals.

In view of the fact that Garland township has never been represented by any man in an official capacity, has never had a man elected to any office in this township since its formation, we are asking that you help us elect one. Furthermore we have always been loyal in helping to elect men from every other township in the county (Hempstead) and many men from some of the townships, and our record bears us out that we have always voted for the best interest of the party, county and state. Inasmuch as at this time we are offering you as high class a man as the state affords, one that we know to be all right, we feel fully justified in asking the good citizens of Hempstead and Nevada counties to vote for our man for Senator and by so doing let us have the honor of furnishing one official.

July 11, 1934, DeAnn, Hempstead County, Arkansas.
